Corrections

After you read

1. Recipe 1

- is visually clearer,
- it lists the ingredients;
- numbered steps follow under the heading,
- precise detail is given; short, clear sentences are used,
- The style is factual and the tone is informative,
- literal language is used.

Recipe 2

- is written in an informal, casual way,
- sentences are long and full of figurative language and descriptive detail,
- measurements are not always precise,
- the long paragraph is not practical when you are standing cooking in the kitchen.

2. Recipe 1 is easier, because of its layout and clear, precise language.
3. Informal register and figurative language are not appropriate for instructional writing. They do not aid clarity.
